Dear Mr. Geekie,

As we've discussed on the phone, there are several thousand people in Canada who have been diagnosed as having environmental illness.

Just for the record, I am writing to confirm my understanding that although several people have died from this illness, and others have committed suicide, the biggest association of doctors in the country is not willing to speak out now to prevent more illness and future deaths.

Is that what the Canadian Medical Association is saying?

(Your answer will be given to the Public Archives as part of the documentation of our fight against bigotry and lack of caring on the part of medical authorities.)

It will also be widely publicized, and a lack of response will be publicized if not received by August 30, 1985.

I thank you for the casual interest you've personally shown so far.
